Coaching for your international career

Professional support from an experienced intercultural coach

About the coach

Thomas has extensive experience working and living in Switzerland, Germany and the United States. A native New Yorker with Swiss and American nationalities, Thomas has views and insights from professional experience in the business sector, the public sector, in large multinational companies, medium sized companies and as an entrepreneur.

Besides providing insights at the individual level, Thomas applies a variety of perspectives to understand circumstances and phenomena with respect to organizational and national cultures.

Thomas combines coaching techniques acquired at the University of Trier together with intercultural training through the Hofstede Centre. Thomas' higher education (B.A. Political Science, M.A. International Studies) and international professional experience is built on an interdisciplinary understanding of people, their cultures and institutions.

In his free time, Thomas enjoys spending time with his family and being outdoors.

"Coaching is about supporting you to recognize and tap into your full potential .

Understanding your unique circumstances is paramount in this process as it sets the stage for new perspectives, insights and tools to enable you to reach your goals."

Thomas Imfeld
